More Railroad Iron for Oregon.

H. L. Gregg & Co. have a vessel on the berth in Philadelphia; the clipper ship Tabor, loading with railroad iron, etc., for the Columbia river, and they announce that the Tabor will be followed by other vessels, having contracted for several cargoes of railroad iron and material, with the option of loading part of vessels' capacity with general cargo. Referring to this business the Standard says:

Mr. R. Koehler, agent for German capitalists who are interested in the Oregon and California railroad and Oregon Central railroad, was called some months ago to Frankfort-on-the-Main to report at a meeting of the bondholders, upon the general affairs of the road. Mr. Koehler returned by the Oregon on her last trip. He confirms the statement, that the bondholders had decided to extend the Oregon Central railroad to Corvallis, from Saint Jo, in Yamhill county. While in New York on his return from Germany, Mr. Villard and himself contracted for steel rails, the same in pattern and weight as those on the Central Pacific road between Sacramento and San Francisco, and for all the necessary rolling stock and motive power. The rails were completed at the rolling mills at Philadelphia on the 21st inst., and will be shipped immediately. Since his return Mr. Koehler has contracted for ties, and has put in the field a locating party, which is now busy in the vicinity of McMinnville. The road will go by way of Amity and Dixie. Grading will commence as soon as right of way is obtained.

Renegades Pensioned upon Yakima.

We do not know who is responsible for the outrage about to be perpetrated upon eastern Washington territory, by making that beautiful and fertile region known as Yakima a sort of Vandiemans land for all the scurvy scamps belonging to the Flute and similar tribes of California Indians, but of one thing we feel quite confident, that it is a shameful proceeding. What are we to do with four or five hundred ugly customers like these? We wish we could agree fully with Bro. Hand, in the concluding remarks of the following paragraph from the Mountaineer, but we fear that it will be a very doubtful and dangerous thing to wait for the settlement of the country to bring about such results, in view of present difficulties in eastern Oregon and Washington territory. The Mountaineer says:

The Indians we mentioned recently as being en route from Camp Harvey to this place are expected to arrive on Five-mile creek on Friday next, and as soon as arrangements can be made will be brought to town or vicinity. These Indians number about 460, big and little. A portion of them are "prisoners of war," captured by General Howard last summer, and the others are members of Winnemucca's band, whose brother accompanies the expedition. The advance agent of this circus is our old friend, James N. Clark, of Grant county, from whom we receive an account of the trip. Mr. Clark has been preceding the outfit a few days to purchase the necessary supplies of wood, beef, hay and grain. He succeeded in making his purchases at very reasonable figures, excepting only in one or two instances. The outfit consists of about 460 Indians, two companies of cavalry, sixty wagons, with as many teamsters. Mr. Clark says the Indians are fat and hearty, and appear to enjoy the journey very much. While camped on the John Day river he noticed a number of young bucks in swimming. The river was frozen along the shore, extending out ten or twelve feet, and the little fat fellows would take a run and slide on the ice on their bellies off into the water. The objective point of the destination of the outfit is in the Yakima reservation, over in Washington territory, but for some cause it will remain here for a while. What object the government can have in moving these Indians to the Yakima reservation is more than we can understand, unless it is in case of an Indian war, the Indians will all be together, and thereby better able to protect themselves. However, in a few more years this vexed question in this section of "What will we do with the Indian?" will be settled, and it will not be by either the interior or the war departments, but by the great rush of immigration, the same as it was settled in California and southern Oregon in early days.

We do not consider that it is any mark of patriotism, nor the part of any citizen, to furnish supplies to any such outfit as the above in passing through the country so lately devastated in part by the scoundrels, and if settlers along the line had refused supplies, or placed the figures so high that the agent of this circus would have been compelled to report an enormous expense in consequence of the plan, perhaps the authors of it would have been more careful in future. It is barely possible that coming events may cause us to change our opinion in reference to this matter, but at present writing it appears to be one of the most grossly ignorant, and contemptible acts ever perpetrated upon an honest community. Were there no lands in California, Nevada, or Arizona, for this caravan of murderous villains. Why are they sent here to become a pest to settlers in the best portions of America? We pause for a reply.
